Leading-Edge Sports Medicine Care

You don't have to be a star athlete to have a sports-related injury. And at the Marshall Sports Medicine Institute, you don't have to leave the area for leading-edge sports medicine care. Cabell Huntington Hospital is proud to partner with the Marshall Sports Medicine Institute to offer unparalleled expertise, state-of-the-art technology and comprehensive care to all active members of our community — from children to senior adults, from weekend warriors to the star athletes of Marshall University.

Cabell Huntington has a longstanding commitment to the Tri-State's active, health-conscious population. Each member of our sports medicine team — including orthopedic surgeons, primary care doctors, physical therapists and athletic trainers — has been extensively trained in the treatment and prevention of sports-related injuries and illnesses. And with the opening of the Marshall Sports Medicine Institute, the region's top sports medicine program just keeps getting better.

In this issue of The Leading Edge magazine, we will take a tour of the brand-new Marshall Sports Medicine Institute. In addition to the indoor practice facility for Thundering Herd athletes, this one-of-a-kind facility houses our comprehensive sports medicine program and rehabilitation center, helping patients and athletes of all ages live, work and play to their fullest potential. With advanced imaging services on site and ancillary services like sports nutrition, sports psychology and chiropractic care, as well as the latest performance enhancement technology and equipment, the Marshall Sports Medicine Institute is truly on the forefront of sports medicine.

Our goal at Cabell Huntington Hospital is to get you back in the game — whether you are an elite athlete or just want to be treated like one.
